

girl in the second row near me. I really "loved" this teacher and was sorely disappointed when about 2 years later she married a man much older than myself.

In the fifth grade I took a special liking to Geography & History, Arithmetic was easy and after "spelling down" the eighth grade class on fifth grade words, I had the desire to be the best in the class, which I believe I was until I graduated from the 8th grade.

Walter E. Clark (a cousin of my father's) was my teacher in the 5th grade and E. E. Puckney was my teacher for the next three years. Rao Hunford, a Miss Wycock also taught part time.

My first paying job was ~~was~~ in collaboration with Hazel. I was eight years old. We went down ^{below} town where Uncle Vernon was running a haying crew and asked him to hire us.

"What are you worth and what can you do?"

We didn't know, but he put us on a
