

Clark, wife of Royal) were en route to General Conference with Father Clark and we passed thru Farmington. Father pointed to a cluster of willow trees by the side of the road and said that it was the place he tried his first and only cigaret, and that it had made him deathly sick. He probably was less than twelve at the time. -Rhoda Clark, 1963.

He could not get his nearest neighbor to go to church; this man was Howard Groo. - Joseph Smith Phelps, 1960.

He regretted signing his water rights in a nearby stream to the Georgetown Irrigation Company. When trading his individual claim for shares in the Company he understood that he was to retain continuous use of the stream. Shortly thereafter the stream was shut off occasionally, then eventually it was shut off altogether. -Walter Clark, 1961.

Twice I have seen Grandpa crying: once when Aunt Nacey died, and then when Uncle Russell and Aunt Ruby were divorced. -Carolee Larsen Harmon, 1960.

Asked if he had known sorrow, he replied, "Yes, sometimes I felt that I stood alone." -Heber D. Clark, 1960.

He regretted that he could not live one hundred years. -Elmer R. Clark, 1962.
